

Kim's game

Back when Glucojel jelly beans were youngsters, lots of kids were in the Cubs and Scouts and Guides. One popular game was this memory game. It's simple. Out of sight of the players, place maybe 20 different objects on a tray and then cover them with a tea towel or a box. Give everyone a piece of paper and a pencil. Then lift the tea towel for 1 minute, ask them to remember the items on the tray, then cover them up again. When you say 'go', everyone has to write down as many items as they can remember. The most correctly remembered items wins.

Baby Blu's tip: Want some ideas for what to put on the tray? How about a toy car, playing card, teaspoon, sick of chalk, yo-yo, bottle top, Lego brick, pen, miniature farm animals, chop stick, dice, key, coin, leaf, miniature action figures, pencil, button, rubber band, grape, Scrabble square, battery or sock.

Add a Little Magic
with

